The war centered around the secession of the southeastern region, predominantly inhabited by the Igbo people, who declared the Republic of Biafra in an attempt to assert their independence.

Adichie's meticulous research and personal connections to Nigeria lend authenticity to her depiction of this period. The novel vividly captures the chaos, the suffering, and the resilience of those caught in the conflict, painting a complex picture that avoids simplistic good-versus-evil narratives.

Literary Influences and Genre

Half of a Yellow Sun is often classified as historical fiction, but it also blends elements of romance, tragedy, and political commentary. Its narrative style is characterized by multiple perspectives, allowing readers to experience the war from varied personal viewpoints. The novel's genre-defining qualities lie in its ability to humanize a historical event often reduced to statistics and diplomatic debates.

Narrative Structure and Style

One of the novel's defining features is its use of intertwined narratives. Adichie introduces three primary narrators:

- Ugwu: A rural boy who becomes a domestic servant to Odenigbo, a university professor.
